Hi Aqib

Could you please send me a quote for the alternative nerve stimulator, and are the leads we use on old handheld compatible.

Also do you repair the old nerve stimulators?.

Thank you

Kind regards

You don't often get email from aqib.majeed@viamed.co.uk. Learn why this is important

Good afternoon Andrew,

Thank you for your enquiry.

The Microstim DB3 Supramaximal Nerve Stimulator was discontinued as a medical product on the 17th May 2019. The reason being is that it is not feasible to CE certify this legacy product to meet the requirements of the European Union Medical Device Regulation (MDR).

The decision to discontinue the Microstim DB3 does not affect any devices already supplied, which were fully compliant with CE regulatory requirements that were in place when the devices were sold. Any devices currently in service bear a valid CE mark and there is no need to withdraw the units from use.

Viamed offers an annual service and will continue to supply spare parts and servicing for a minimum of 7 years.

If you are interested in the alternative - the TOF 3D, please see link below to our website.

I would be happy to send you further information relating to the TOF 3D.

Kind regards
