Important security information about your PDQ terminals

We've had reports that fraudsters are targeting PDQ terminals. Using a range of distraction techniques, they remove the PDQ when it's unattended and change the function from 'sale' to 'refund' before making a transaction. This type of fraud only takes seconds – so please make sure your staff know where the PDQ is at all times. You should always keep PDQs out of reach of customers except when making transactions. Treat it with the same care as you would cash or your till.

If you spot anything suspicious, please report it to management or the police immediately and keep hold of any CCTV footage.

Important Information

Important security information about your PDQ terminals

We've had reports that fraudsters are targeting PDQ terminals. Using a range of distraction techniques, they remove the PDQ when it's unattended and change the function from 'sale' to 'refund' before making a transaction. This type of fraud only takes seconds - so please make sure your staff know where the PDQ is at all times. You should always keep PDQs out of reach of customers except when making transactions. Treat it with the same care as you would cash or your till.

If you spot anything suspicious, please report it to management or the police immediately and keep hold of any CCTV footage.
