Hi David,

Please find attached a zip file containing the service records for the Tom Thumb infant resuscitators located on the Delivery Suite and Neonatal Unit at Sunderland Royal Hospital, which were completed on the 15th, 16th and 17th April 2014.

On this occasion, our engineer could not locate 3 of the 48 units that are logged as being with the Trust. The serial numbers of the ones that he could not find are as follows:

040086 - unable to determine date of last service
040090 - last serviced Dec 10
VMC02 - last serviced April 13

Sometimes instruments cannot be located at the time of a service visit but turn up at a later date; if any of the above units come to your attention before the next service visit, they can be returned to Viamed for service. Alternatively, if your records indicate that any of the above units have been decommissioned, please advise and we will mark them as no longer requiring service. For reference, these should be on the Neonatal Unit.

If we do not hear otherwise, our engineer will attempt to locate them at the next service visit and we will provide a report at that time of any units that we not located.

Please could you confirm receipt of the attachment? Thanks in advance.

Regards,
